Call for Abstracts

The Law Department of the University of Udine (Italy) welcomes abstract submissions for consideration at the conference “Il riconoscimento dello status filiationis acquisito all'estero: prospettive europee e resistenze nazionali – Recognition of status filiationis established abroad: European perspectives and national resistance”. The conference will be held on 24 October 2019 in Udine. It is coordinated by Elisabetta Bergamini (Associate Professor of International Law, University of Udine) and Francesco Deana (Lecturer of European Union Law, University of Udine) and it involves renowned scholars as well as young researchers on trending international, private international and EU law topics on the protection and recognition of status filiationis.

Background of the conference

This event is the final conference of the research project on “Continuità transfrontaliera dello status filiationis e tutela dell'interesse superiore del minore – Cross-border continuity of status filiationis and the best interests of the child”. The project is supervised by Elisabetta Bergamini and funded by the programme “Piano Strategico di Dipartimento” promoted by the Law Department of the University of Udine. It is aimed at providing a consistent framework and a systematic discussion of the issue of recognition of status filiationis in cross-border family situations. Therefore, it examines the impact of international law (notably, European law) on this issue, in the light of recent institutional, regulatory and case-law developments.

The final conference will consist of a morning session, including four speeches of 25/30 minutes each, and an afternoon session consisting of two round tables that will involve a total of ten participants respectively on the subject of "New frontiers of legal parentage" and "National identity v. individual identity. Limits and counter-limits to the recognition of status filiationis". Up to two presentations per round table will be selected through this call for abstracts.

Target & Topics of the Call for Abstracts

This Call for Abstracts is directed at advanced Ph.D. students (or within three years of its completion), post-doc research fellows and academics at early stages of their career of any nationality and affiliation, who are encouraged to submit proposals concerning public international law, private and procedural international law, or EU law, including also comparative perspectives. Within this broad scope, the proposed topics need to present a timely character and innovative methodological approach to the research, or explore new challenges and fields of inquiry. The goal is thus to provide an invaluable opportunity to share and exchange views with renowned academics and legal practitioners, and to network with other researchers in the respective fields of interest.

Presentation type

Selected applicants will held oral presentations, of 10 minutes duration, to be delivered in Italian or English in a panel format.

Presentation themes

Abstracts may be submitted under one of the following 2 themes:

1. New frontiers of legal parentage.
